MISSION BEACH ROLLER RINK

GRAND OPENING THIS AFTERNOON AND EVENING OF SPLENDID RESORT

Manager Edward A. Kickham announces the opening today (Saturday) of his palatial new roller skating rink at the great amusement center in Mission Beach. Manager Kickham has built a superb building in conformity with the superb style of Spanish architecture required by the Mission Beach company.

The rink covers an area of 90x150 feet at the northwest corner of Mission boulevard and the Prado in the heart of the amusement section. The floor is of carefully selected maple. Both building and floor are declared to be the finest devoted to roller skating on the Pacific coast.

Opening of the rink is set for 2 o'clock this (Saturday) afternoon. It will be operated daily thereafter from 1:30 to 5 o'clock in the afternoons and from 6:30 to 10 o'clock evenings.

BOOSTER MEETING BY MISSION BEACH FOLKS IN NEW SKATING RINK

In response to a general invitation a large and representative crowd of business men, residents and property owners of Mission Beach attended a get-to-gether and booster meeting for Mission Beach in the new skating rink at the popular new beach resort last night. The business meeting was followed by a dance given by members of the Mission Beach Athletic club. H. L. Moody city auditor and assessor, was chairman of the committee of entertainment and he was assisted by Harry Turner, A. N. Abelson, H. Beal, W. J. Hinkle, F. V. Burkee, W. C. Huff, Guy Camerlengo and others. Details of the plans for bettering and improving the beah will be duly published in these columns.

MISSION BEACH BOOSTER CLUB

Followin gthe temporary proceedings, the Mission Beach oBoster Club was organized with Judge Charles De Long as president, and Attorney oJhn W. Mott as secretary. The object of the club will be to promote civic improvement throughout the residential section of the Mission Beach district.

MISTER CITY MANAGER: ANOTHER LIGHT, PLEASE! AND SOME PAVING

At the regular monthly meeting of the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce last Monday night, it was unanimously agreed that notification should be sent to City Manager Rhodes and the members of the council concerning some of the civic improvements needed "right now" in Ocean Beach.

More paving and more lights are wanted. The early illumination of the extensively dark area at the corner of Brighton avenue and DeFoe street will be particularly requested. And it wouldn't be a bad idea to see that some of the present lights on DeFoe street "stay lit." For instance, the one at the corner of Saratoga avenue. It's somewhat like Finnegan. First it's a-light agin, then it's out agin, and so on ad infinitum! Come to the rescue, please, Mr. Metz, with a box of candles, or a new carbon connection, or whatever it is that'll keep that corner light trimmed and burning!

QUICK POLICE WORK

Miss B. Sorenson of 4938 Snta Monica avenue reported to the police station that her Chevrolet car was stolen from in front of her home, March 3. Police officers found the car in San Diego, on the same day and it was returned to her.

VOTE FOR THE LIBRARY BONDS

BAY FRONT FOLKS FEEL URGE OF SPRING FOR HEALTHFUL BEAUTY

With the advent of spring, when the annual urge for the beautification of premises is paramount, special attention is called to the Board of Health regulations regarding the disposal of refuse and garbage in the beach and bay districts. Residents of the section bordering on the "Loma Canal" are almost unanimous in their desire to make the northerly approach to the beach "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." And in this connection, all interested are requested by neighborhood folks to refrain from polluting the waterways in any manner, in order that the canal may be kept clean, healthful and free from obnoxious sewage and disagreeable odors. Plans are underway for beautifying the bay frontage by the railway company and the folks who own adjacent property will be asked to do their share in improving the appearance of their premises along the shore line.

Ocean Theatre

FAMOUS FILMS FORM FIVE FEATURES FOR FINE FOLKS

Manager Ray Ericcson has shown excellent judgment in his selection of current bookings at the Ocean Theatre. For instance, this Saturday night Lois Wilson stars in "Another Scandal" and tomorrow (Sunday) night: "Sinners in Silk," will be seen, with the rollicking "Go Getters" as an added attraction. The mid-week special on Tuesday and Wednesday will bring the famous "Merton of the Movies" and on next Friday and Saturday "Love's Whirlpool," will feature James Kirkwood and Lila Lee in the leading roles.

P. A. KIERSTEAD ADDS MORE GASOLINE EQUIPMENT TO SERVICE STATION

Another huge tank for the storing of gasoline has been added to the already large and varied equipment for the convenience of patrons of P. A. Kierstead's Service Station at Voltaire and Cable streets. There are three tanks installed now and serving respectively Shell, Red Crown and Associated gasoline. The popular and enterprising proprietor has also arranged new and enlarged equipment for repairing and recharging all makes of batteries, while making a specialty of Excise and New York brands. "PA" Kierstead also extends free crankcase service and gives Merchants' trading stamps to all customers at his up-to-date station.

FAITHFULNESS FORMS THE CAMPAIGN WATCHWORD OF CITY DAD BRUSCHI

Upon the announcement of the candidacy for re-election by Councilman Virgil Bruschi, emphasis has been made in "The Beach News" of his faithfulness in serving the public. Known familiarly to his hosts of friends by the affectionate term of "Dad," the popular councilman states that, if re-elected, he will continue to serve the city as faithfully during the next four years as he has in the past. And that's saying a big volume in a few simple words. "Dad" Bruschi is a member of the O. B. Chamber of Commerce and has been ever to the fore in promoting the welfare of the Beah and Bay districts. His faithfulness to his constituency and his untiring efforts in behalf of the city's interests are marked by conspicuous results for the benefit of taxpayers. It has been truly stated that what Councilman Bruschi has accomplished during his tenure of office forms one of the brightest chapters in the political history of San Diego.

VOTE YES FOR AN INCREASE IN PAY FOR POLICE AND FIREMEN

Adoption of the amendments for the proposed increase in the pay of firemen and policemen is earnestly urged at the next election. It is authoritatively stated that a statistical survey has shown that the police and firemen of San Diego receive lower pay than those of any other city in the state. It is also pointed out that fire insurance rates are lower here, because, fire insurance underwriters have announced that San Diego possesses the best fire department on the Pacific Coast. Vote YES for the police and firemen amendments. They are your friends in the time of need and danger, and they are on the job night and day.

SPECIAL INVITATIONS FOR SOCIAL AND DANCE BY THE P. M. CLUB

Here's a copy of the crispy invites being sent out by the Peninsular Masonic Club:

"Let's go. Social and dance, Tuesday the Tenth at 8 o'clock, p. m., at the club rooms in Ocean Beach. Ask the lady to throw a few sandwiches into a box and come over for a real goo dtime. Boxes will be auctioned off with a fifty cent limit. Members are urged to invite their friends to come with their ladies. Good Music! Good Fellowship!! Big Surprise!!!"

CHULA VISTA BOOKED HERE FOR SUNDAY

The second game in the county league series will be played on the beach diamond by the Ocean Beach team tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon, when they will have the Chula Vista club as opponents. Be there, all ye fans, and root, root!

OCEAN BEACH TEAM WINS FIRST GAME

In their first clash with the Richards & Bowman team at National City last Sunday the Ocean Beach baseball club carried off the honors by a score of 8 to 4 in a great twelve inning game. The local team thus becomes a top-notcher in the newly-formed county league.

MANAGER W. E. BENBOUGH MAKES MARKED IMPROVEMENT AT O. B. DANCE PAVILION

The finishing touches are being put upon some very decided improvements to the interior of the Ocean Beach Dance Pavilion. The music stand, formerly stationed in the center of the dancing floor, has been enlarged and moved to the southeast corner, where the acoustic properties are more advantageous, while the change permits greater space for dance patrons. Manager "Bill" Benbough has also had a huge mirror ball hung in the center of the hall to add color and variety to the dance numbers. The great glass globe revolves while spotlights in brilliant hues are directed upon it and the reflections produce a most magnificent effect upon the moving figures of the dance folks.

As a special attraction tonight (Saturday) and tomorrow (Sunday) night the famous Apache and fango dancers, the Rays, will display their wonderful terpsichorean abilities.

THE CUE BALL IN THE CORNER POCKET

Lowell A. ("Shorty") Schaffer has assumed the lease of the pool hall in the Ocean Beach Dance Pavilion. The Schaffer brothers recently disposed of their holdings in the Maine Garage and "Shorty" says baseball his pool room.

MAYORALTY CANDIDATE FRED A. HEILBRON FAVORS CIVIC IMPROVEMENTS

"The Library Bonds, insuring Ocean Beach its own community library, should and I am confident will, be approved by a decisive majority," was the declaration of Fred Heilbron, candidate for mayor, when asked by "The Beach News" how he felt about the civic center proposition.

"Ocean Beach is enjoying a splendid growth, and need such civic projects as a library. I am heartily in sympathy with the propoed Ocean Beach Civic Center, and I will do all I can to insure it being brought about.

Speaking in regard to the office of mayor to which he aspires, Heilbron said: "The office of mayor can be made an important factor in building a greater San Diego, and that will be my principal purpose if I am elected chief executive.

"A mayor and council working in the closest harmony are one of the essentials in promoting a city's progress. The mayor's authority is limited by the charter, but that does not mean that he must be a figurehead. Aggressive leadership and ability to sense the public's desires, and then to serve the public enthusiastically and loyally, are among the qualifications which public servants should possess.

"The commercial and industrial development of the community need not in any way interfere with those distinctive advantages which make San Diego the ideal home city. A start has been made on a definite city plan which will insure that all phases of the community's life will be given due recognition.

"The relation of public utilities to the ommunity is a matter which concerns every citizen. Happily these relations in San Diego are well grounded. Merely as an instance, our transportation problem has been satisfactorily solved, the present excellent condition being due, in no small part, to the activities of the transportation committee of the city council, of which it has been my privilege to be chairman.

"With CO-OPERATION as a slogan, every citizen doing his and her part, there is no limit to the greatness which San Diego may attain."

PARENTS INVITED TO ATTEND HIGH SCHOOL NEXT TUESDAY

Following the custom of holding a receiving day at the San Diego High School about six weeks after the opening of each semester, the principal and teachers have issued a special invitation to all parents of pupils to be in attendance next Tuesday afternoon, March 10, at 2:30 o'clock. The P.-T. A. is co-operating with the teachers and it is hoped that a thousand or so parents will be in attendance.

NEW POLICE STATION STILL AWAITS CONSTRUCTION AT OCEAN BEACH

Months upon months ago the city purchased a splendid site for a new police station with modern public comfort accessories on Abbott street, between Saratoga and Santa Monica avenues. Plans were to be drawn for an up-to-date building and long ere this the sub-station was to have been occupied and the adjacent comfort arrangements opened to the public. Yet the idea seems to have struck a snag somewhere and the city fathers will be asked some pointed questions about it soon by the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce. Early and definite action will be sought for the construction of the station before the opening of the regular summer season.

SEASHORE ENTERPRISE PLANNED AT PACIFIC BEACH BY PRIVATE INTERESTS

In a petition filed with the city clerk last Monday requesting the council to close one or more unnamed streets near the seashore at Pacific Beach, plans are revived for the proposed construction of a large amusement pier by private interests. A special conference was held with the members of the council by those citizens directly interested and the matter was referred to the city attorney for an opinion as to the city's right to grant such a petition. Signers to the petition are the Union Title Insurance company, San Diego Beach company, Earl Taylor and A. H. Frost. The petitioners stated that property owners at the beach favored the improvement.

O. B. LIBRARY

MARGARET RANKIN, Librarian

VOTE YES FOR THE LIBRARY BONDS

For the next few weeks the boys and girls are going to speak for the LIBRARY BONDS. The prize essay contest will award $20.00 to the boy or girl who writes the best paper on "WHY SAN DIEGO NEEDS BRANCH LIBRARIES." The following essay is contributed by a Senior High School boy of Ocean Beach, whose name will be published later, The judges are to pass on the essays soon and the prize essay will be duly published in "The Beach News."

EDUCATION; AND WHY SAN DIEGO NEEDS MORE AND BETTER LIBRARIES

Education is no longer a mere factor in the growing and developing of cities. Today it is the foundation, the nucleus of a city. No city can live, or even start without education.

Three great branches of education exist, namely: first, Public Schools, where the pupils are personally in touch with the instructors; second, Correspondence Schools; third, and very important, Libraries.

Correspondence Schools are private institutions, where, after paying a certain sum of money down, and so much per month, you receive your education on some certain subject, and on that subject only, until you either know enough about that subject to get employment, or until you decide that you and that subject can never be friends. In the latter case, which often happens, your money, time, patience and energy are lost.

Public schools and night schools teach almost any subject, and courses ranging from five to twenty-five hours a week may be taken. The instructors, tools, buildings, and materials are paid for by taxes and there is little or no cost to the applicant. This department of education may be termed the largest and most influential.

Yet, a close second, comes the libraries. Books, pamphlets and magazines on every subject on the face of the earth, and on many subjects conceivable to the mind only are stored here by the thousands, ready to be loaned FREE for certain lengths of time. This branch of education is the farthest reaching, the most easily accessible and the most used.

Men and women who work all day are too tired to go to night school; or the inconvenience of distance may keep them from going, yet the Public Libraries are within easy reach of everyone, and whatever mood you are in, there are books that will suit, please and soothe you.

Education, the magnet, the builder, is firmly embedded in California. California has good schools and good libraries—for the most part—because the people in California realize the value of education!

San Diego has got to hustle to keep up with the rest of California, because San Diego's libraries are 'way below par! San Diego has good schools, and a right to be proud of them, but the citizens of San Diego have got to work hard to pull up the libraries.

SCHOOL PAVING AND BUILDINGS

HALF A MILLION WANTED BY SCHOOL BOARD FOR IMPROVEMENTS

In order to complete new school buildings now under construction and to finance improvements on streets adjoining school property, the Board of Education has decided to ask for a bond issue of $500,000 to be submitted to the voters at the April election. Of the amount asked, $400,000 is wanted for the high school fund, to be used in completing the senior high school auditorium, for building an auditorium at the Point Loma high school, completion of the Point Loma building and purchasing of shop equipment for the Point Loma and Woodrow Wilson junior high schools, and paving, grading and sidewalking around these buildings. The remaining $100,000 is asked for the grammar school fund, for street improvements around twenty city schools.

KATHERINE TINGLEY WILL SPEAK SUNDAY

Tomororw (Sunday) afternoon at the temple service which is open to the public at the International Theosophical headquarters, Point Loma, Katherine Tingley will continue her series of addresses on "Theosophy and the Problems of Life." A symposium on "Karma and Self-Directed Evolution" will be given by a group of students of the Theosophical university. The music as usual will be rendered by the Raja Yoga students of the Isis Conservatory of Music.

CIRCULATING PETITIONS FOR CHILDREN'S PLAYGROUND BOND ISSUE ELECTION

Members of the Ocean Beach Women's Club are circulating petition for the Children's Playground bond issue and when the requisite number of signatures are secured the petitions will be presented to the city council for the calling of a special district election. The petition has been legally drawn in order to obtain the Harmon Fund donation and the acreage sought for the proposed playground is included in the contemplated civic center. A copy of the petition is on file at "The Beach News" office for the convenience and accommodation of signers.

STOPPING SHOOTING ON MISSION BAY

An ordinance prohibiting the discharge of firearms on the shores of Mission bay passed a second reading in the council by a vote of three to two this week. Councilmen Weitzel and Stewart, voting in the negative.

The ordinance passed its first reading several months ago. Councilman Bruschi had it drawn from the files last Monday, saying he was not present at the first reading and did not have a chance to vote.

Children now-a-days are not all Abraham Lincolns. They have neither the time nor the initiative to go miles out of their way to get books.

Yet, after all, the step to change this, and to give San Diego libraries that YOU can be proud of, is not long, nor the work hard. It merely means that YOU be at the polls on March 24th, nd that you vote YES for the LIBRARY BONDS! The cost is small, less than ten cents to the average taxpayer this year, and it decreases every year!

Consider this—are not better libraries, more books, increased population for San Diego and increased prosperity for YOU worth more than ten cents or less a year?

OTTERS OUT OF DOORS

"Now, now,' said Mother Otter, "we must all pay attention."

"Mother means," said one of the little Otters, "that we children must pay attention to her. She doesn't mean that she must pay attention to what we say."

"That is what mothers always mean, I think," said another wise little Otter.

But they could not talk any more now. Lessons had begun.

First of all there was the lesson of diving without splashing.

"Of course," said Mother Otter, "when it is playtime you may dive and splash all you like. But you must also know how to dive without splashing so you can fool your enemy."

So Mother Otter taught her children the diving-without-splashing lesson, which is as important a lesson in Otter school as spelling is in regular schools.

After they knew their lesson pretty well for the day Mother Otter taught them how to catch frogs and how to get off the frogs' skins after they were caught.

In Otter school that was as important as it is for people to learn how to use a fork and how bad it is to eat with a knife!

The next lesson was in eel eating. That was just as important a lesson in Otter school as reading or arithmetic is in regular schools.

"Children, Otter children," said Mother Otter, "do this right. Eat the eels from the tail just as the trout must always be eaten from the head."

Trout Must Always Be Eaten From the Head.

At first they found it as hard to do as you might find it to get an arithmetic sum right. But the lesson had to be learned.

Mother Otter was a strict teacher. She didn't allow any fooling.

Then they had a lesson in how to wander far from home and come back another way so as to deceive their enemies who might be trying to trace them home the way they had gone out.

They had a busy time with lessons, and then they took trips and learned to explore, to find out where the best rivers and banks were to be found, and how they could travel and what they could eat along the way.

They learned not to be too fussy about their food. "If you only eat a few things," said Mother Otter, "and those few things give out you will have trouble. So learn to eat many kinds of food and you will live long and get strength."

They learned all their lessons well—these smart young Otters, but every evening when lesson time was over—for Mother Otter was quite strong for night school—they played.

Such a-scrambling and a-tumbling and a-playing and a-scampering and a-frolic as there was, and Mother Otter joined in their play, too.

She didn't sit off and read and knit and say:

"Children, don't make such a noise. You tire my poor head."

No, she was just as fond of playing with them as she was of teaching them. And before they went to sleep Mother Otter sang them the Otters' Bedtime Story-Song which goes like this to the accompaniment of a splashing sound:

Go to sleep, little Otters, my dears,
Drive away all your fears, fears, fears,
If you learn the Otters' wise ways,
You'll live for days and days,
And nights and nights and nights,
So drive away your frights.

Go to sleep, little Otters, my dears,
Play when you can, play drives away tears;
And playing makes you cheery,
Keeps you from being weary,
And when all is said and done,
There's nothing just like fun!

Go to sleep, little Otters, my dears,
Go to sleep, little Otters, my dears.

Not Good Friends

Jack, age three, was told to come in and get ready to go to the barber's. He pouted all the way to town and when he arrived at the barber shop, where he was quite a favorite, one of the barbers, seeing Jack's mad look, said, "Well, Jack, are you and I still good friends?" and Jack replied in a real disgusted tone, "Well, you are, but I'm not."

Botany and Zoology

The teacher had been reading to the class about the great forests of America.

"And now, boys," she announced, "which one of you can tell me the pine that has the longest and sharpest needles?"

Up went a hand in the front row.

"Well, Tommy?"

"The porcupine."

Community Building

Front Yard Considered Part of Public Street

The planting in the front yard of a city or suburban home occupying a rectangular lot of ordinary size is as much part of the public street as is the parkway. It should be developed with this in mind.

While fault has been found with the Americans' method of discarding walls and fences and setting their homes where all may see, no defense is needed other than the example of the beautiful results which this practice has achieved in our garden suburbs.

But these results depend upon the extent to which the planting in front yards is in keeping with the nature of our front yards. The planting should harmonize with that in adjoining grounds. It should enhance the merits and screen the faults of the house architecture. And it should express the occupants of the home as their clothes should express them. The public aspect of the home grounds should not be out of keeping with the character of its occupants.

A woman who would not wear an evening gown uncovered on a street car should not make her front yard a flower garden. The objection to conspicuous flowering shrubs in the front yard is based on the same feeling that discourages conspicuous public attire. Another ground for such objections is the fact that front yards are on view the year round, while flowering shrubs are brief in session; so that foliage effects are more important because more lasting.

Scientific Proof That Paint Is Life Saver

Paint saves life, says Dr. Max C. Starkloff, health commissioner of St. Louis, as quoted in Health. The connection between paint and health would seem to be remote, yet Doctor Starkloff shows that they have a very close relation. "In a lying-in hospital," says Doctor Starkloff, "at a given period there were over a hundred cases of puerperal fever with a high death rate. In an effort to clean up the hospital and make it sanitary to the last degree, the entire place was painted, including floors, ceilings and inside walls. After the painting, cases of puerperal fever almost entirely disappeared. The New York health department is using paint rather than fumigation for sterilizing rooms which contagious disease patients have occupied.

"As further proof of the value of paint as a disinfectant, Mr. Henry A. Gardner of the institute of industrial research at Washington painted a wall surface and then sprayed it with liquid cultures of different germs. A similar area, unpainted, was also saturated with germ cultures. Microscopic study showed that the unpainted area gave abundant growth of germs while the painted area showed that the germs had developed very little."

Striving for Ideal Home

The ideal home as pictured is not impossible to have. It really should be the kind of home found in every community and on every farm. The ideal certainly is worth striving for, and it may ultimately be attained. Only by aiming for high ideals can we make progress toward better things, and this is true especially in home-making and community building. —Anniston Star.

Look to Old Age

"Parents who save in order to own their home are able to look forward with confidence to a happy old age, whereas the great majority who do not save become dependent on someone else as they grow older. It is by the familiar experiences of family life that thrift, honesty, straightforwardness and self-discipline are best instilled.

Make War on the Rat

In every way the rat is a nuisance and a threat to health and property. No town or community is free from their damaging activity. No home, unless it is a very new one, is free of them. They serve no useful purpose and always are doing damage. A wholesale elimination of the whole rat population would prove a blessing.—Anniston (Ala.) Star.

Economy

Every dollar spent for paint saves $5 or $10 or $100 what would otherwise be spent on repairs or lost through depreciation. When properly protected by paint, a frame dwelling will last for generations and the maintenance cost will be greatly reduced in so far as renewal and repairs are concerned.

Satisfactory Statistics

In one year there were 104 villages that were given mail-carrier service and 164 small towns that got city service, according to the report of the postmaster general at Washington. This indicates the steady growth of small communities in the country better than anything else.

Can Build Your Tube Protector

Old Lamp Socket and Some Sealing Wax Principal Things Used.

Ever burn out a tube? Fans who have done so find that it is rather expensive and disheartening, to say the least. Ever see a tube light up brightly for a second, and then go out forever?

A local radio experimenter, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger, has devised a little instrument which can be made by any fan at a very small cost. This tester shows if there is a short circuit in the receiving set.

The construction of this "tube saver" is very simple, as reference to the accompanying diagrams will show. The materials needed are:

One piece of heavy bus wire five inches long.

One old "B" battery.

One old vacuum tube.

One eight-volt flashlight lamp, with socket.

In addition to these parts, a soldering iron and a blow-torch will be necessary.

First of all the bus wire is bent in the shape of a "U," as shown in the drawing. If heavy bus wire is not on hand smaller diameter wires may be soldered together to make a strong handle.

The next thing is to take a burned-out vacuum tube and break the glass. The elements inside are then broken off until only the base remains.

Finding the filament prongs is the next step. In the accompanying diagram the method of finding these prongs is shown. They are directly opposite the side where the "bayonet pin" is fastened. Wires from these two filament pins are run to a small flashlight lamp socket. The plate and grid wires are removed. It will be found that a Christmas-tree lamp socket will be very satisfactory. Solder all connections.

The handle of the unit is placed in the base of the vacuum tube socket. A torch or other heat is used to melt pieces of sealing wax taken from an old "B" battery. As the wax melts pour it into the vacuum-tube socket, being careful, of course, not to pour any into the flashlight socket inside. Keep pouring until you have the old tube socket completely filled. The handle will be imbedded securely when the wax hardens. Painting the socket will give the tester a neat appearance. Black shellac will be found good for this purpose.

When you want to use the tester insert the small eight-volt flashlight lamp. Suppose you have just completed wiring a receiver. Before placing the vacuum tubes in their sockets put in the tester. If by any chance you have the "B" batteries connected across the filaments the small lamp will burn out. As these lamps are not expensive, it is better to have this lamp burn out than the filament of an expensive tube.

If you wish to use the tube-saver only as a guard against connecting the "B" battery across the filaments of vacuum, the eight-volt lamp will be the only one necessary. However, if you are not certain of your "A" battery voltage, a lamp which is rated at 1½ volts would serve to show whether your battery was correct for a dry cell tube, such as the WD-11. A six-volt lamp could be used to show whether the voltage was right for the large six-volt vacuum tubes.

Effects of Location

A radio set located in a frame dwelling will in many cases receive greater distances and will receive with more volume than a set located in an apartment house, which, as a rule, has a superstructure of steel. The steel structure, being a conductor of electromagnetic waves, has the effect of absorbing radio waves, therefore taking away some of the energy that ordinarily would reach the antenna.

Defective Tubes Cause Havoc

Tubes are primary causes for batteries to run down prematurely. Many defective tubes draw more plate current than they are rated for. Bootleg tubes sometimes draw two or three times more current than standard ones and this causes havoc with B batteries.

Wit and Humor

A BAD SHOT

"Yes," said the teacher, "we have several plants and flowers named with the prefix 'dog.' Of course, the 'dog-rose' and 'dog-violet' are well known to you all. Can any of you tell me others?"

For some seconds the class remained dumb. Then a bright idea illuminated the face of an urchin, and up went his hand.

"Collie flowers, miss!"

Some Cause for Distinction

"That is the Hon. John J. Windiddy going by," said the landlord of the Petunia tavern. "He is regarded as one of our most distinguished citizens."

"Ah, yes! And for what is he distinguished?"

"Hanged if I know! Probably for the fact that the cat did not take his breath when he was a baby."

THE GIRL, OF COURSE

Teacher—Willie, what is amiss with the sentence, He waited, but she didn't come?

Smart Kid—The girl, of course.

The Blunt Truth

It is a strange anomaly,
And yet the thought steals o'er me.
The jokes whose points I cannot see
Are just the ones that bore me.

The Peacemaker

"Did you try to make peace between those two men who are always quarreling?"

"Yes."

"With what result?"

"Each seemed to regret that he wasn't too busy with the other to turn in and give me a fight on my own account."

Another Luxury

"Young man," said the elderly millionaire, "by daughter has had every luxury."

"Every luxury but one, pehaps, and that one I am in a position to supply, sir."

"What do you mean?"

"A husband."

Judge Bacon

"Do you think Bacon wrote the Shakespeare plays?"

"How should I know?" rejoined Miss Cayenne. "Some parts of them are highly improper and I shall not allow my literary research to involve me in an implied attack on the judiciary."

Raising Cane

"Did you go to the pictures alone?"

"Yes, mother."

"Then how does it happen you left here with an umbrella and come back with a cane?"—Bursts and Duds.

WELL, WELL

Potato—What does the farmer do with all the tomatoes he raises?

Tomato—He eats all he can, and cans all he can't!

Immunity

The actor's words are far from neat,
Yet he is unmolested;
If we said such things on the street,
No doubt we'd get arrested.

Gossiper

Bill—Fred says you kissed him the other night.

Jill—Oh, I did not! Besides, he promised he wouldn't tell.

Quite the Contrary

"I'm afraid father was very angry when you asked him for me, wasn't he, Jack, dear?"

"Not at all. He asked me if I knew any more respectable young men who would be likely to marry your three sisters?"

Evidence

"Does that young man who stays so late mean business?"

"I guess so, pa; he seems to be willing to work overtime."

Three Generations Kept Healthy and Happy

"Beecham's Pills were always considered indispensable by my parents during sixty years of married life and I am never without them in my home, as they are used when required by myself (aged sixty-one), and wife and children. This covers a period of over eighty years.

My wife and sons also believe there is no remedy for constipation and biliousness equal to Beecham's Pills.

So many so-called "cures" for biliousness and kindred troubles leave after effects that are certainly injurious, but Beecham's Pills give prompt relief and leave one in a healthy and happy condition." N. J. M. Ramsay, N. J.

Merely Change of Lines

As George Robey, an English actor, was entering the stage door, he was held up by a "resting" brother professional, who announced impersonally that if only he could raise the fare to Sheffield he would be working over Easter.

"But dash it," said Robey, "it's not three hours ago, outside the Cavour, that you pitched me the same tale about going to Plymouth—and touched!"

Undefeated, the brazen one gulped, took a firm hold of his unsteady wits, and retorted with vast indignation:

"Well, what of it, George? What of it? Even you change your patter, don't you?"

Advice to Mothers

Salem, Oreg.—"During each expectant period my back ached terribly and I had such bearing pains that I had to keep to my bed a great deal. One day I read of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and decided to give it a trial. I was very thankful for the comfort and relief that this remedy gave to me and I feel sure that if other young mothers would take the 'Prescription' thruout the entire period they would be saved much of the distress and suffering that most women endure."—Mrs. Mabel Ross, 359 Center St. All druggists. ### WHEN AND HOW OCEAN BEACH FIRST OBTAINED ITS PRESENT NAME

In the current installments of the "LOMA LORE" series, Mrs. Winifred Davidson is most interestingly portraying just how and when OCEAN BEACH originally obtained its name and also what the seashore district was called in days long agone. The story is well connected and delightfully told. Don't miss it!

NEAT AND NIFTY THEATRICAL JOURNAL

Fresh from the press of Dove & Robinson, an enterprising and well known firm of theatrical printers of San Diego, a copy of the initial issue of the "Theatre News has reached our desk. And, right here, at the very first glance, we want to say that it's a pippin. The front cover is neatly and attractively arranged, and besides the title and the listing of a dozen theatres, there is an excellent photo reproduction of the entrance at Pantages' splendid new show house.

The "Theatre News" consists of sixteen pages, of convenient readable size and is brimful of bright and breezy news about current attractions at San Diego's theatres, a special page being devoted to each prominent playhouse. A center feature about "Who's Who in the Pit," is particularly pleasing, from the fact that it enables the theatre-goer to "meet the men who make the music which makes the play worth while." Taken all in all, the "Theatre News" is a most welcome and nifty newcomer in the local journalistic world. It is circulated free to all theatre patrons.

CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

FLY-AWAY NANNIE

"AND be sure to lock the door after you," ended Nannie's mother. But by this time Nannie was out of sight and hearing. It was always that way. This was just like her—going off half-cocked and losing the end of her mother's directions. Now the chickens would all escape while she was bringing in the eggs. Nannie was what the neighbors called a "fly-away child."

Then she grew up. She was pretty and she was pursued. Christopher pursued her with slow and deliberate methods. Christopher always weighed the consequences before acting. The ground was solid, not only beneath Christopher's feet, but also several yards in advance of him. Indeed, he cut a poor figure beside young Dashwood, who would take a situation by storm, who won—if he won at all—by his ardor and sweeping ways. Dashwood posed and gestured before Nannie with his hat on the side of his head and his air of "Take me or leave me and be quick about it—you won't get a second chance." But, in spite of the fact that young Dashwood was so gay and romantic, and Christopher unhurried and rather heavy, Nannie really liked Christopher better.

Then, one day at the railroad station in town, she thought she saw Christopher's broad shoulders through the crowd—Christopher and another girl. As she watched he bent and bestowed an unmistakable farewell kiss upon the lady clinging to him. Then Nannie, hot with mortification, boarded her suburban train. Presently Dashwood joined her. During their half-hour journey Nannie brought matters to a head and reached home engaged to be married. There on her own porch was Christopher, who had never been to town that day at all.

When Nannie had been married for a year young Dashwood left her. She had enough money to scrape along with—but that was all. One day she read the alluring advertisement of a mining investment. By purchasing shares at the existing low price she might triple her income in a month. If she waited a day to get advice from her broker her opportunity would be gone. Nothing venture, nothing have. Nannie got together every bit of her capital she could lay hands on and bought mining stock heavily. Then, before long, her friends heard that she was penniless. "Firing without aiming as usual," was the general verdict.

But Christopher went to see her. Laboriously and methodically he told her that he had always loved her. Nannie's reaction was outraged anger. She would show Christopher that, even if she was destitute and a beggar, even if her husband had deserted her, she would keep to the narrow path of virtue, she wouldn't be insulted by any one, she was still Dashwood's wife. So she interrupted him with old-time vehemence and Christopher went away for good. Too late she learned that, had she waited for the end of Christopher's long proposal, she would have known that he came to tell her the news of Dashwood's sudden death and her own freedom.

Her habit of pulling trigger before she took sight had lost her her last friend.

WASHINGTON

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THIS was his greatness; he combined
Vision and judgment, fact and dream;
His was the truly balanced mind,
Not skeptical, nor yet extreme.
No thinker quicker caught the gleam
Of new-born stars in human skies,
And yet he tested star and stream,
On earth and heaven kept his eyes.

This was his greatness: he could be
Leader and comrade, master, man;
He wore the robe of dignity,
With human brotherhood his plan.
He was the first American,
A pattern for a nation now,
His soul as large as heaven's span,
His heart as tender as its dew.

This was his greatness: Washington
Met strength with strength, yet could be kind
Without the look of weakness—one
Who firmness, gentleness, combined.
His was the truly balanced mind
That none could flatter nor defame;
To glory and ambition blind,
He won, unsought, a deathless name.

THE DIM, GRAY STREAK

By R. RAY BAKER

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

THE sun pushed itself over the rim of the sea, burst through a cloud, and glared at the lifeboat dancing on the deep. Two men sprawled in sleep on the bottom of the boat. One had on a grimy silk shirt that had once been pink, gray trousers that bore faint traces of a tailor's iron and brown oxfords of the latest mode. The other's habiliment consisted of a blue blouse and saggy pants.

Dangling indolently from a bladeless oar handle standing upright in the bow was a coat that matched the gray trousers. It was intended to serve as a sail, but it served not well; for even the best of sails are useless without wind.

For six days they had drifted. Deprived of oars, they had nothing but profanity with which to urge their frail craft through the seemingly infinite field of tossing blue.

The sun shining on his face awoke the sailor. He yawned and blinked at the red orb with eyes that were bloodshot and set in a florid, not unintelligent but rather brutal countenance, which was not rendered more attractive by a week's growth of black bristle. A livid half-moon scar starting back in his crow-colored hair curved down over his forehead, reaching nearly to his left eye.

He sat up and his gaze roved to the west, meeting the horizon. Turning to the east, he discerned an endless, hazy gray streak about two miles from the boat.

"Fog!" he grumbled. "Even that's somethin' for a change. But land! Ain't there land nowhere? A whole week without seein' it—an' nothin' t'eat 'cept biscuits hard as bricks."

"An' there ain't many o' the biscuits left, either," he muttered. "Le'see, must be 'bout fifteen—an' water's scarce, too."

He crept to the bow and opened a locker, from which he brought forth a tin breadbox and raised the cover.

"One—two—three," he counted, peering in. "Yep—fifteen. That'll last jes' a day an' a half, ef we're careful."

He closed the tin and replaced it.

"Jes' enough to last a day an' a half," he repeated, as he seated himself in the bow and cast a baleful look at the coat hanging from the oar. "A day an' a half—fer two men. An'," he added, as that same hard expression crossed his face once more and he looked meditatively toward his companion, "they would last jes' three days fer one."

His right hand went into his blouse and reappeared with a long clasp knife. He opened it deliberately and tested the edge, over the stub where the second finger of his left hand once had been.

The sleeper was snoring with gusto. The sailor stood up in the boat and it careened. He took a step toward the slumbering man, the knife clutched in his right hand. The sailor stepped backward and the boat careened. He dropped into a seat and hastily concealed the knife in his blouse.

The landsman opened his eyes and met the gaze of the seaman, who grinned, but it was a ghastly grin. The landsman smiled pleasantly.

"Good morning," he said cheerily. "Am I late for breakfast?"

The sailor scowled.

"Breakfast!" he sneered. "Soggy biscuits an' stale water—that's breakfast, dinner and supper, and I guess we gotta cut down on the size o' our meals. Say, have you got anythin' left that acts like tobacco?"

The other took a cigarette case from a pocket of his trousers and raised himself on an elbow. He held out the case and the sailor snatched it greedily.

"Hello, what's that?" inquired the landsman, his voice thrilling with a note of hope as he looked eastward. "That can't be land, can it? Or is it a mirage? I don't remember how land looks, it's been so long since I saw any."

The sailor opened the cigarette case.

"Jes' one o' these smokes left."

"That's all right," said the owner of the case. "Go ahead and smoke it. I can get along without tobacco. But say," he persisted, "I asked you about that gray streak. Is it possible that's land?"

The sailor found a match and lighted the cigarette. He took a couple of deliberate puffs, then responded:

"Yep, that's what it is, frien'. It's land. It's bobbed up durin' the night; and we're gonna be rescued pretty quick—ef we can find some way o' gettin' ashore."

"Looks rather funny for land," mused the other, raising himself to a seat. "Well, if it it's land, how we going to get to it?" he asked.

The sailor inhaled deeply and blew a cloud of white, tantalizing smoke toward the landsman.

"One o' us'll have to swim fer it and bring help to the other," he answered, that squinty expression crossing his face. "It's only 'bout two miles, and a good swimmer can make it easy. How about it, can you swim?"

"Sure I can. But I don't know about swimming two miles in my present condition."

The sailor was silent while he shaded his eyes with a hand and appeared to be measuring the distance to the cloud-like curtain he had declared was shore. Finally he spoke.

"It can't be over a mile and a half. I'd swim it myself, only I can't swim. I reckon it's our only chance—fer you to try it."

While the derelicts were discussing the prospects of rescue the sun disappeared behind a mass of black clouds that had come up suddenly in the west and charged across the sky.

The landsman looked at the cloud with eyes that expressed doubt.

"I'm not afraid!" he said sharply. "Only I want to live as long as I can. I'll try to make it to land—provided it is land, as you say. But I must have something to eat first."

The sailor produced the tin of biscuits and handed one of the soggy things to his companion, along with a cup containing water.

The landsman ate the biscuit without enthusiasm, still somewhat greedily.

"I could manage to swallow another of those dough-things," he suggested, his appetite unappeased.

The seaman hesitated and cast a surreptitious look skyward, where more black clouds were concentrating.

"Come on with a biscuit," the other insisted. "There's no use hoarding the food—so long as we're going to be rescued."

Grudgingly the sailor provided another biscuit and cup of water, all the time watching the sky and the indistinct streak he had told his companion was land. When the landsman had finished his frugal repast he repressed his desire for a smoke and began stripping, depriving himself of all except undergarments.

"Here goes for land," he announced as he balanced himself on the stern of the boat. Then he thrust doubts aside and cast himself into the sea.

He got his bearings and set out with slow, easy strokes, seeking to conserve his energy. The minutes passed. More clouds unfurled from the horizon, and thunder rumbled. Lurid, jagged streaks of light darted across the heavens. A strong west wind puffed into existence.

The choppy waves were superseded by long, rolling ones, which mounted higher and higher as time went on. The little boat was hurled high above the ocean at intervals to fall with a crash. Darkness began to settle, although it was not yet midday.

The sailor shivered, for the wind was raw, and his clothing had soaked up some of the brine that had been washed over the gunwales.

"It's all up with him," he said aloud. "The fog bank has done me a good turn. One less mouth to feed."

* * * * * * * *

The professor looked up from the book he was reading by the light of a kerosene lamp. Speaking in Spanish, he addressed the dark-skinned girl who emerged from the adjoining room.

"How is the patient?"

"He will get well, father, although he is very weak," was the reply. "He seems to be somewhat delirious, and keeps saying something about a man in a boat."

The professor closed the book, and, rising, donned a raincoat.

"There may be something back of that," the old man asserted. "He was raving about that when I was in the room. At first I thought it was the man's fancy running wild; for he seems to have gone through a severe experience. It may be he swam ashore to get help for some one who was caught in the storm. I will investigate."

He lighted a lantern and stepped toward the door of the dwelling, about which the wind was whistling a doleful serenade.

"If there was any one out there in a small boat in this storm it has gone hard with him," he went on. "Perhaps he might have been tossed ashore, however, and I might be able to succor him."

The professor opened the door and the resultant gust of wind all but extinguished the flame of the lantern. He dodged out quickly, slammed the door and made his way down a narrow path through the woods to the nearby shore. A short distance away the towers of the Argentine observatory loomed against an angry sky whenever the lightning furnished sufficient illumination to form a contrast in the inky blackness of the element-embattled night.

"One of the worst storms New Year island has suffered in years," he mused as he turned his course parallel with the shore, against which gigantic waves were battering. "The South Atlantic gets very spiteful at times, especially this close to Cape Horn."

He had not far to go before his search bore fruit. The lantern disclosed, directly in his course, an overturned lifeboat, beside which was the huddled form of a man. The professor reached down and seized the left wrist, which he held for a moment, then felt for the heart.

"No pulse," said the professor, as he turned the man on his back.

Holding the lantern close to the face of the corpse, he made out a rough, bearded countenance, with a half-moon scar running down from the hair toward the left eye.

The right arm of the dead man encircled a battered tin breadbox.

IS IT KISSAM?

THERE seems to be much difference of opinion and uncertainty concerning the surname Kissam. However, there is no uncertainty concerning the fact that the family was founded in this country by one John Kissam, born in 1644, who made his home in Flushing, L. I. It is not known where he was born. That is, some authorities say that he was born in England, while others say he was a native of Amsterdam, Holland, and others have it that he was a Huguenot from Montpelier, France. It would be interesting for some member of the Kissam family to trace to its source each one of these traditions.

The fact that the Kissams were always strong supporters of the English or Episcopal church certainly suggests that they were English rather than Hollanders, though there are some instances of families of Dutch name having become devoted Episcopalians. Sometimes the fact that the head of the family married women of that church led to the future alliance of the family with that church.

It is also recalled that the Kissams were strong Tories in the Revolution, a fact that has been cited in proof of the English origin of the family. But this might be explained in another way. The Kissams were from the first persons of prominence in Queens county, Long Island, and intermarried with the Whitehead, Rutgers, Hewlett, Treadwell, Combs, Van Brunt, Vanderbilt and other prominent families in and about New York city.

Semple—There is no doubt that this is derived from an earlier form of surname, St. Paul. This sort of contraction of a saint's name was quite usual.

Holland—At first sight you might suppose that the first to bear this name was a native of the Netherlands, but it is an English name derived from a small place in Lancashire called Holland.

Maud—This is clearly a matronymic. That is to say, it is a surname derived from the mother rather than from the father.

Lowe—This is usually a German-Jewish name and, of course, is from the word meaning lion in German. About a hundred years ago, when German Jews were required by law to adopt a definite surname, many took names of animals and birds, as Adler, Eagle, Hirsch, Hart and Wolf.

SUNDAY NIGHT SUPPERS

THE evening meal on Sunday is usually a light one. To the old-fashioned folk, there is no dish that they like better than mush and milk.

For those who enjoy the chafing dish or who are fortunate to have men in the family who like to dabble in meal getting, Sunday night is a good time for their activities. Omelets, rarebits, with sandwiches and coffee, toast with various additions, are all good. Oysters stewed, fried or escalloped, are not beyond the ability of a tyro in cookery.

A good piece of toast may be the basis for any number of good things. Creamed eggs, fish, oysters or creamed vegetables of some kind, as vegetable oysters. An easy way to prepare fried oysters is to dip them in milk, then in rolled cracker crumbs and fry them until plump, in butter. Serve with a relish of some kind, even the ordinary cabbage finely shredded and dressed with vinegar and salt, is most palatable. If one wishes to be quite elegant, serve the relish in halves of lemon, one for each plate.

An onion sandwich is very popular for a night lunch. Cut the mild onion into very thin slices, dip in a good highly seasoned French dressing and use between slices of thin buttered bread. With a glass of hot milk, or a cup of cocoa, the appetite is satisfied.

Onions are especially recommended to ward off disease, and in keeping the body in good health.

A simple salad that even a child may be taught to serve is lettuce with peanuts and a mayonnaise dressing. Use head lettuce, sprinkle with chopped nuts, a very little minced onion and a generous portion of mayonnaise. This with bread and butter and a hot drink, is another good meal.

Cottage cheese with minced pepper, chives and a bit of salad dressing is a nourishing dish.

Cold meats, fish and fowl are always popular to serve for a supper dish. Any may be used as sandwich filling which are in too small pieces to serve as cold meat.

Rocks.

Take one and one-half cupfuls of brown sugar, one cupful of butter, one cupful each of walnuts chopped, and raisins, also chopped; three eggs, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of salt, three and one-fourth cupfuls of flour and one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one and one-half teaspoonfuls of hot water. Mix as usual and drop by teaspoonfuls on baking sheets.

Saddle of Venison.

Lard a saddle of venison and cook the same as a saddle of mutton. Serve with currant jelly sauce. To prepare it take one cupful of brown sauce, add one-fourth of a cupful of currant jelly and a tablespoonful of orange juice.

Deviled Pecans.

Put shelled pecans into a frying pan, add a teaspoonful of olive oil, stir until slightly browned, pour out on absorbent paper, sprinkle with salt and a few dashes of red pepper. Serve at once before the crispness has been lost.

RESORT STYLES ARE PROPHETIC; MATCHED COAT AND HAT LATEST

GAILY the annual fashion parade takes its way across the lovely horizon of genial winter resorts in a brief "season." It grows like a beautiful, multi-colored bubble, beginning in January and vanishing in March, but in that short time an aggregation of spring and summer styles has shown which way the winds of fashion blow. Those who stay at home see these styles reflected in newspapers and magazines, as in a looking glass, and have the advantage of a careful selection of the things worth while noting.

Reporters bring or send back the cheerful tidings that many clever wash dresses are worn, made of linen or cotton materials that closely resemble the striped or plaid novelty silks popular for morning and sports wear. Striped cotton broadcloth and plain linen appear to lead the bright procession, but voiles are so well represented that they are expected to outstrip the heavier fabrics when summer comes.

Plain crepe de chine, canton crepe and printed silks occupy an important position in the spring modes and when the plain crepes are used the vogue for ombre colorings is made the most of. Three or more shades of one color in the material used for the frock appear, by means of bandings used for trimming. The sand-colored canton crepe dress shown in the picture is an example. The lightest shade makes the dress and scarf with two darker shades used in bands at the hem line, on the sleeves and scarf ends. The hat worn with this frock repeats these colorings and if the young lady's footwear were revealed it would disclose sand-colored hose and shiny black kid slippers with three straps.

Printed silks in frocks, ensemble suits combining printed and plain fabrics, both in silk and linen, bengaline and two-surfaced crepes, kasha cloth and jersey are all stamped with the seal of fashionable approval.

"Where are you going my pretty maid?" "To walk in the Bois, kind sir, she sayed," in French. At any rate that is what one would infer from the chic of her new spring outfit and the brevity of her coat. The French are "long" on putting snug collars and fur bandings on coats for their little ones but very "short" in covering their chubby legs, which are mostly bare. The skirt portions of dresses are mere frills set onto long bodices and the coat pictured here is longer than the average.

However American mothers may decide to dispose of small persons' legs, they will be interested in this plaid flannel coat with hat to match, for the little lady of four or more. It is a simple affair with raglan sleeves and is finished by bias bands of the flannel. A wide bias band extends down the front and narrower ones, with piping of plain silk, about the sleeves. A bias band makes the collar and the pocket flaps are cut on the bias. The coat is shown in gray and white plaid and gun-metal gray buttons fasten it.

The hat to match, is flexible and has a tall crown with braid decoration. The facing is probably of silk in pink, rose or red, for a strong color note is almost universal in ensemble for little children.

Flannel in the larger plaids and in high colors is used for making capes for little tots. These are usually cleverly set onto a yoke that extends across the back and over the shoulders and fastens with groups of buttons down the front. For the littlest girls that walk about there are plain coats, of silk or wool cloth with shoulder capes and pretty bonnets to match.

CHOOSING AND COOKING A ROAST OF BEEF

Various Cuts of Beef.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If one would serve roast beef of first-class quality it is necessary to know the characteristics of the various market grades of dressed beef and the typical retail cuts. A well-chosen piece of meat may, however, be ruined in the cooking; so it is equally necessary to know the method of cooking that will bring out the best qualities of the particular grade and cut selected, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

How to Choose Wisely.

In any one carcass the parts of the animal that have been exercised, as the neck or the shank, are made up of tougher muscle or coarser fiber and are drier. The less exercised parts, which are embedded in the bone structure, have more tender muscle fiber and are more likely to have a protecting layer of fat on the outside as well as marbled fat throughout the lean. Prime rib roasts and porterhouse and sirloin steaks show these characteristics.

Differences between tough and tender cuts are more accentuated in low-grade beef than in good or medium beef. To judge the grade of beef several points must be considered: First, the color and texture of the meat, and the extent to which it is marbled with fat are important. Bright red color and even grain are the most desirable. Second, the thickness of the meat covering the bone must be noted. The proportion of bone is higher, as a rule, in lower grade than in good or medium beef. Third, the amount and character of the fat and its general distribution and color may influence the grade. The proportion of fat is lower in low-grade beef than in the medium and good grades. Fourth, the amount of inside fat, such as kidney fat on the loin and layer fat on the inside of the ribs makes a difference. The best cut from a low-grade animal may be inferior in texture, flavor, and juiciness to a less choice cut from a high-grade beef.

Methods of Cooking.

The choice cuts of meat are the tender cuts. These should be cooked so as to develop and retain flavor. This is done by applying heat without any moisture in the pan. A very high temperature is used at first to sear the outside so that the juices will be retained. After the outside is seared or sealed up, the heat is lowered in order that the meat may cook through without burning. This method should be used for first-class roasts and steaks such as prime ribs, porterhouse and sirloin, and even chuck and rump from the high-grade animals.

In order to make tough, dry meat tender and palatable it is necessary to apply "moist heat," or to use water in cooking. Whenever water is added, however, some of the rich flavor of the meat is sacrificed. A part of it goes into the gravy, but the volatile part passes off in the air as merely an appetizing smell. In order to keep in as much of the juices as possible the meat is seared over first at a high temperature just as in the case of the tender cuts. This steam helps to make the tough fiber tender, but at the same time it softens the outer crust and allows part of the juices to leak out, carrying much of the flavor from the meat into the gravy. This method is known to the housewife as pot-roasting or oven-braising and is used to soften the fiber of a moderately tough, dry cut such as a roast from the round and brisket. If very tough meat, for example, neck or shank, is being cooked, it should be surrounded with water. So much of the flavor of the meat will then be in the gravy that this becomes an essential part of the meat dish.

RECIPE FOR JUGGED HARE IS OUTLINED

Thoroughly Tested by Department of Agriculture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The United States Department of Agriculture has thoroughly tested the following recipe for jugged hare. Belgian hare, jack-rabbit, or wild rabbit may be used.

Clean the hare, remove the tough skin and membranes covering meat. Cut into pieces of about 2-inch lengths; cut half pound of bacon into dice of about ½ an inch square. In a plate mix three teaspoonfuls salt, one teaspoonful black pepper, four teaspoonfuls flour, half teaspoonful thyme, one bay leaf broken or crushed, three teaspoonfuls finely chopped onions, one teaspoonful grated nutmeg, and a pinch of ground cloves. Roll the diced bacon and one-fourth of the meat of the hare in this mixture. In a saucepan melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, or lard and butter mixed; when hot add the bacon and all the meat, brown nicely, add a little hot water or soup stock and simmer for half hour.

A Savory Dish of Jugged Hare.

Cabbage Surprise

2 cupfuls shredded cabbage.
1 red pepper.
½ cupful nut meats.
2 cupfuls celery.
¾ cupful salad dressing.

Blend finely cut pepper, nuts and celery with the cabbage. Moisten with cream salad dressing. Chill and serve on lettuce leaves.

DRIED FRUIT BALLS GOOD FOR CHILDREN

Recommended Because Less Sweet Than Candy.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Dried fruit balls are a simple confection, easily made from household materials. They are recommended for children by the United States Department of Agriculture, because they are less sweet than candy, and because many dried fruits contain iron and other minerals which the growing bodies of children need. Try putting a few of these fruit balls in the school lunch box occasionally in place of cookies or cakes. A fruit mixture of this sort also makes a good sandwich filling.

Dried Fruit Balls.

Almost any combination of dried fruits, with or without nuts, may be used. The following were found to go together particularly well: Apricots, pears, and nuts; figs, dates, and nuts; peaches, apples, and nuts; raisins without seeds, apricots, and figs.

Use equal quantities of any fruits selected. Wash and dry thoroughly and run them, and nuts if desired, through the meat grinder, using the smallest blade. Add a little salt, and moisten with enough sirup to make the mixture hold together and keep its shape when formed into balls. Roll the balls lightly in powdered sugar or dip them in coating chocolate.

Chocolate Coating.

Melt the commercial chocolate prepared for this purpose in a double boiler. Be careful not to let the water in the lower part boil, for this makes the chocolate coating streaked when it hardens. With two-tined fork lower the fruit balls into the melted chocolate. Lift them quickly and scrape off with a knife the surplus of chocolate that drips from them. Place on waxed paper to dry.

Egg Puff

4 eggs.
1 cupful evaporated milk diluted with 1 cupful water.
5 tablespoonfuls sifted flour.
1 teaspoonful salt.

Separate yolks and whites and beat each until light. Blend flour with enough milk to make a smooth, thin paste, then add remainder of milk, yolks of eggs and salt. Cut and fold into this the stiffly beaten whites; then pour mixture into buttered baking dish. Set in pan of water and bake in a moderate oven about 30 minutes or until firm. Serve at once with 1 cupful of medium white sauce to which has been added ½ cupful shredded blanched almonds. This is attractive for luncheon.

THE LIGHTHOUSE

But to the lighthouse once more. The buildings consist of a very neat and commodious dwelling house surmounted by a tower fifteen feet high, also several immense sheds erected by the government for the purpose of catching rain-water enough during the rainy season to fill the cistern. These roofs are very flat and are arranged with spouts, etc. Water and wood are items of considerable importance here, both having heretofore been brought from San Diego. We were conducted through the entire establishment by the gentlemanly keeper, Mr. Israel, and his wife, who is his assistant in the care of the light, and shown the mechanism of the light, which is very ingenious. Everything is scrupulously clean; the glass reflectors of the lantern fairly dazzle the eyes. There is a small room in the tower, below the light, for the accommodation of the watchers, and here they pass the long hours of the night, watching alternately the light of the huge lantern, which is a welcome beaconn to the "toilers of the sea" who may be within reach of its rays. The light, which is 480 feet above the ocean, can be seen upon clear nights a distance of sixteen or eighteen miles. The roar of the wind about the tower is almost deafening, and necessitates the voice being raised to the highest pitch whilst conversing within.

Scrubby Vegetation

The vegetation around the lighthouse is very meagre, consisting of very low, scrubby sage brush. Mrs. Israel told us that he had endeavored in vain to make a few of the most hardy flowers and vegetables grow, but the position was too much exposed to admit of cultivation. * * *

The Mussel Beds

There are also several extensive mussel beds (along the ocean front, near where Ocean Beach now stands) and during the summer a drive to this charming beach and a picnic mussel bake is one of the many pleasures enjoyed by San Diegans, and during pleasant weather numerous carriages, with gay pleasure seekers, and often weary invalids, may be seen flashing along the hard level road, and, sometimes one may see some of San Diego's fair equestriennes exhibiting their grace and skill in the delights of a flying gallop, and whose glowing cheeks, and ringing voices proclaim the effect of the cool bracing breezes, and the health giving exercise.

Future Sea-Side Resort

"The Rocks" (now Ocean Beach) are destined one day to become a famous sea-side resort, next only to La Jolla, and would even now be much more visited were there any accommodations for visitors. As is the case of parties going to La Jolla, everything necessary for the comfort of man and beast must be taken with you, even water, which causes considerable trouble to those not accustomed to such things. If the traveling public could be provided with a good hotel, for instance, as the Ocean or Cliff House of San Francisco, I think it would prove a means of establishing either of these places where they deserve to be, among the finest watering places on the coast, and would be found to exactly suit many invalids who come to San Diego for the purpose of benefiting by our equable climate. As it is, many who feel disposed to pay these places a visit are prevented on account of the drive to and from, as being too tedious for a feeble person to undergo, and they are consequently debarred the pleasure of noting these charming localities. But my advice to the hale and hearty who can conveniently do so, is not to delay, but get a good team and an experienced guide and do San Diego's ocean beaches, forthwith, and you cannot fail to feel that you have been well advised and amply repaid for your exertion.

Here, in this article of "Maggie May's" I find for the first time the suggestion of the name OCEAN BEACH, for "The Rocks," and the "Mussel Beds."
